

Adrienne Kurai

The Forgotten Flame of Twilight

Race: Shadar-Kai (Fey-Lost)

Class: Bladesinging Wizard

Background: Fey-Lost

Age: 315

Adrienne Kurai is a warrior and scholar caught between two worlds—the twilight grace of the Feywild and the haunting stillness of the Shadowfell. Though she bears the spectral resilience of a Shadar-Kai, her time in the Feywild has left her with an otherworldly presence, neither fully of shadow nor of light. She is elegant yet unyielding, a Bladesinger who sees combat as a symphony—each clash of steel a note, each spell a verse.

She does not speak of her past—not because she hides it, but because there is nothing to tell. Her life is the road ahead, her purpose forged in the pursuit of greatness. What she seeks is not survival, not fortune, but power. Not for its own sake, but for acknowledgment.

Adrienne has come to Alimus in search of the means to transcend mortality itself. Here, where magic and faith converge, she believes she can unlock the secrets of the divine. To study at Tonttu Academy, to hone her blade alongside the greatest warriors, and to find a way beyond the walls of this plane, reaching the courts of the Fey and the depths of the Shadowfell.

She speaks with confidence, moves with purpose, and carries herself like one meant for more—as if she already walks a path carved by destiny. Some may call her arrogant. Others may see a dreamer with impossible ambitions.

But Adrienne Kurai does not dream. She knows.

She will be remembered. She will be worthy. She will be more.

Even if it means challenging the gods themselves.